Application to Purchase Timber Land.

No. 75.

UNITED STATES LAND OFFICE, Bodie, Cal., Dec. 15, 1879.

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN THAT whereas John W. Bagby, a citizen of the United States, over the age of twenty-one years, has made application under the Act of Congress entitled "An Act for the sale of timber lands in the States of California, Oregon, Nevada, and in Washington Territory," approved June 4, 1878, to purchase at this time the 1/4 of a 1/4 of a 1/4 of a 1/4 of a 1/4 of a 1/4 Section 21, Township 4, N. R. 20, E. M. D. 18, containing 160 acres, claiming said land to be usable chiefly for its timber. And the said applicant having made and filed in this office the affidavit as to the character of said land as required by said act.

Now, therefore, any and all persons claiming said above described land, or a part thereof, and desiring to file their adverse claims with the Register of the United States Land Office, at Bodie, State of California, must do so within sixty days publication hereof, or they will be barred by virtue of the provisions of said act.

Dated at Bodie, California, December 15, 1879.

There is something soft and tender in the fall of a single snow-flake, but when it comes to crawling out in the morning and shoveling away a big drift, it's onery, mean and disgusting.

We are able to take care of ourselves in love affairs when we are young, and when we get old we are all convinced of the inability of other folks in youth, to look out for themselves.

A London paper believes that it is much more important to a girl to be pretty than to a boy to be clever.

Men who have not time to be honest find abundant leisure for dishonesty, sometimes.

DO YOU THINK IT A SIN?

Do you think it a sin in the gloaming To sit near a neat-fitting dress, With the dainties of maidens within it,
And lily-white fingers to press?
Or softly to lift a stray tress?
That steals over a bosom of snow,
Or to peep into eyes that are glistening From dark-fringed eye-lids below?
Or to see just beyond where she's sitting A something you ought to repair, And pass your arm round her to fix it,
And then to forget your arm's there?
Or, just in a fit of abstraction,
To tell her there's something you miss,
And while she is helping you find it,
To steal from her mouth a sweet kiss?
And as she's removing you mildly, You draw in your arm rather tight,
And tell her you're sorry you did it, If she does not think it quite right?
And then in your penitent moment You say that to you it is plain You ought as a matter of fact,
To give her the kiss back again.

WASHINGTON'S EMOTION.

Washington had accepted an invitation from Arnold to breakfast with him on the day the plot was discovered, but was prevented from keeping his engagement by what men call chance—by the earnest request, namely, of an old officer near whose station they passed, to spend the night there and inspect some works in the neighborhood. Next day, while Washington, with his staff, including La Fayette, were seated at table at the officer's head quarters, a dispatch was brought to the American General, which he immediately opened and read, then laid it down without comment. No alteration was visible in his countenance, but he remained perfectly silent. Conversation dropped among his suite; and after some minutes the General, beckoning La Fayette to follow him, passed to an inner apartment, turned to his young friend without uttering a syllable, placed the fatal dispatch in his hands, and then, giving way to an unconquerable burst of feeling, fell on his neck and sobbed aloud. The effect produced on the young French marquis, accustomed to regard his general (cold and dignified in his usual manner) as devoid of the usual weaknesses of humanity, may be imagined. "I believe," said La Fayette, in relating this anecdote, "that this was the only occasion, throughout the long and sometimes hopeless struggle, that Washington ever gave way, even for a moment, under a reverse of fortune; and perhaps I was the only human being who ever witnessed in him an exhibition of feeling so foreign to his temperament. As it was, he recovered himself before I had perceived the communication that had given rise to his emotion; and when we returned to his staff not a trace remained on his countenance, either of grief or despondence.

OLD PETER.—The industrious spider commends himself to my esteem, nor am I alone in the fancy. Frequently people are met with who do not share the general antipathy to these interesting and ill-used little creatures. A few years ago the writer had a conversation about spiders with a waiter. This man had a pet spider which lived in the attaching-room of his house, and he said that he could always induce it to come out of its hole by whistling. The little creature's web was carefully preserved from injury, and at the time this interesting circumstance was related to the writer, the spider was regarded as a pet of the family. Similar cases might perhaps be furnished by observant lovers of the animal world, but unfortunately very few people seem to be aware of the spider's partiality for music. If experiments were made with different kinds of instruments by skillful musicians, it is extremely probable that very interesting results might be obtained.

Young men, we don't want to discourage you, but it is estimated that more than ninety-nine per cent of all the poetry written on the changing seasons is never published. If you would have all the paper you write poetry on, and sell it to the old rag man at two cents a pound, you would soon have enough money to buy an ulster with.

A Florida man, who owns 150,000 head of cattle, is a miserly reclus, living in a shanty that has neither fireplace nor chimney. He sells his surplus cattle in Cuba. He seldom sees strangers and hides all his money in caves on his land.

Of what good is it to assure a disappointed lover that there are as many fish in the sea as ever were caught? Loving differs from fishing precisely in this, that in love the sea has but one fish; the rest are all contemptible.

There are 30,000 persons serving sentences in the State prisons of the United States, and yet no man can step into a hole through the sidewalk without complaining that this is no country for law and justice.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 15th, 1879.

In the present session, as the whole is to be judged by the first two weeks, it will be more notorious for inefficiency than the last session was for viciousness. Only two appropriation bills have been passed by the House, and these really are important ones so far as any political difference is concerned. They are the Fortification and Pension Bills. I suppose the Senate may pass them promptly in order to make some show of doing business. But in reality the Democrats are attending almost exclusively to work of a partisan nature, and grave Senators are devoting their time to canvassing on the distribution of patronage.

Mr. Hubbell of Michigan, the Republican member who had charge of the Pension bill in the House, made an interesting statement on presenting it, of the fact that the appropriations amount to $32,404,000 an increase of three millions over last session, this increase is due to recent legislation.

Representative Hanner of Pennsylvania, proposes to investigate the Pension Office, and many Republicans may back him in the effort. A great deal of fault is found with the present management. It is charged that Commissioner Bentley is running it for his own aggrandizement and that notwithstanding the great expense of the Office, its business is unnecessarily behind. One cause of this condition of things will be found to be that Bentley has been putting too many Democrats in his Bureau for the purpose of conciliating the Brigadiers.

There will be a large gathering of Republicans here this week on account of the National Committee meeting. The National Committee and the Congressional Committee will probably together make plans for a re-organization of the campaign of '80. Both organizations will be ably managed.

The animus of the Democrats is shown in the fact that they hesitated to appropriate money to pay the Marshal's services performed this year notwithstanding they had nothing to do with elections. The amount due them for enforcing the laws is more than half a million dollars, but the Democrats outside are trying to invent some means to attack this deficiency to the next bill and then refuse to pass it except with the prohibitory clause regarding elections. They are brooding mischiefs, whether they have the courage to carry it out or not.

As Congress will adjourn next Friday for a recess of eighteen days, there will be little left here except in social circles which will be unusually animated this winter, it is thought. After the reassembling the round of receptions and dinners will be continuous until Lent.

MAXWELL.

A GRADUAL ADDITION.—Don't be in too great a hurry to increase your possession. If one has not the money to spare for much, let him confine himself to the little. After a while he can venture on another part; and, after waiting and earning, on still another and another, and another, either paying as he goes, or simply availing himself of the indulgence. Do not attempt too much at once. Do what you can afford this time, and put off the other things to another time. Don't try to build too much and too fast. Do not buy at once all the furniture you would like to see in your house. A little that is paid for is worth more than much you owe for. This should be heeded by the press of Bodie.

Small Farms.—The Los Angeles Express says that the orange crop of M. Brivallier is estimated at 1,500,000 this year. He has sold it at the rate of $15 per tree, or a total of $22,500. His grape-crop from one hundred acres of vineyard sold for $9,000. Thus Mr. Brivallier realizes $31,500 from trees and vineyards covering less than 120 acres.

They are having very cold weather and heavy snows in the East. On Monday last seven feet of snow fell at Port Jervis, N. Y.

THE CHRONICLE.

BODIE, DECEMBER 27, 1879.

THE CONDENSATION OF MILK.

The Germania Telegraph, in an article on the milk business, calls attention to the vast saving that would be effected by the condensation of milk. Nine gallons out of every ten of milk is mere water, as it comes direct from the cow, without any additions from the pump. The transportation of the article is costly, and the expense is there fore ninety per cent, more than it would be if the milk was condensed on the farm that produces it, or a factory established for the purpose. The system has been established out West, and a spoonful of the condensed milk with ten of water produces a far better article than is supplied to those who are served with what is called pure milk at home. The dairyman receives very little for his milk, the six, or eight or ten cents a quart, demanded by the milk agent going mostly into the pockets of the latter, leaving not more than two or three cents for the producer. The milkmen have to provide milk cans, which, being handled by men accustomed to smashing baggage, do not last long; and it requires a man with a horse and wagon to serve one or two hundred customers; so that although their profits are large, they seldom grow rich. It must also be considered that the condensation would prevent any loss from milk from souring and being returned to the producers—a dead loss after the payment of transportation expenses. The cheese factory system has in the districts where it has been established, lightened the troubles of the dairymen; but the manufacture and general use of condensed milk would be an effectual cure. In London condensed milk has become so popular that it has driven the natural article out of the market. A most remarkable fact is that the article popular there is not a British article, but is put up in Switzerland. With this example before them, the dairymen of this section should be warned of the danger that the western condensed milk may drive the produce of their dairies out of the market. The English milk producers have had their eyes opened, and are about to establish condensing factories, so as to avoid the loss of their entire milk trade. The present system is so wasteful, and therefore expensive to the consumers, that a remedy should be adopted.

THE ROMANCE OF A HAIR.—The romance of a hair comes from Vienna. A poor girl with beautiful hair went to a barber to sell it. He tried to make a close bargain, saying hair was plentiful this year, and declared he could only give her eight florins. The little maiden's eyes filled with tears, and she hesitated a moment while threatening her fingers through her chestnut locks. Finally she threw herself into a chair and said: "Then take it quickly." The barber was about to cut off the tresses, when a gentleman sitting in one of the chairs interrupted him and spoke to the girl. "My child," said he, "why do you sell your beautiful hair?" "My mother has been nearly five months ill. I cannot work enough to support us. Everything has been sold or pawned, and there is not a penny in the house." "No, no, my child; if that is the case, I will buy your hair, and give you one hundred florins for it." He gave the poor girl the note, the sight of which dried her tears, and he took up the barber's shears. Taking the locks in his hand he selected the longest hair, cut it off, and put it carefully in his pocket book, thus paying one hundred florins for a single hair. He took the poor girl's address, in case he should want to buy another at the same rate. This charitable gentleman is mentioned as the head of a large industrial establishment in Vienna.

Many a man gets committed to some high and heroic course in his best moment, often wondering afterward by what inspiration he was thus raised above himself. Happy is he whose opportunity of decision finds him at high-water mark. Happy, if he have stability enough to stand by his decision after it is made.

A New York court has decided that a couple can marry themselves in the presence of witnesses, and that $3 saved for car fare and cigars.

A thorough man of the world is one who can shake hands cordially with a friend whom he has just black balled at a club.

Notwithstanding all the modern improvements in farming, the matrimonial harvest is still gathered with the cradle and thrashed by hand.

A fashion magazine says, "Usters will be worn somewhat longer this winter." Well, then, the men who wear them have got to wear stills, that's all.

"Truly," said Mr. Skimpole, "when creditor come to dun you, they so completely feel the disconcerting character of their mission that they have to invent the most phantasmagoric excuses for troubling you, such as increased expense in the family and so on. Why actually one fellow came and dunned me for some money because he was being pressed for payment of the court fees and a retainer by the lawyer he had employed to sue me."
